FINE MACKEREL FARES.

Four Gloucester Seiners Have 800 Barrels at New York.

FISH STARTED AT 8 CENTS APIECE.

New Sch. Mary E. Harty in From Maiden Trip.

Eight hundred barrels of fresh mackerel at New York this morning and here it is only April 15, four days before the first seiner, sch. Marguerite Haskins, arrived there last year with a small fare.

This was the good news which the dispatches from Fulton market brought to the TIMES office this morning. The news was too good almost to believe, but there it was. Others had dispatches and soon the good word was passed all along the street. Fishermen and vessel owners heard it, smiled and looked pleased.

It is wonderful what an effect the news of mackerel in New York has upon the Gloucester populace. Everybody appears to have a special interest in each craft, and acts as if he were making at least $1000 by her arrival.

It is the beginning of the mackerel fever, which rages and is contagious only in Gloucester. It is a disease which grows in strength as the trips roll in, and the higher this fever, the better the health of the victims become.

There were four arrivals up to 7.30 o'clock this morning, as follows:

Sch. Richard Wainwright, Capt. Thaddeus Morgan, 300 barrels fresh medium mackerel.

Sch. Mary E. Harty, Capt. Charles H. Harty, 150 barrels fresh medium mackerel.

Sch. Marguerite Haskins, Capt. Benj. Spurling, 150 barrels fresh medium mackerel.

Sch. Helen Miller Gould, Capt. Solomon Jacobs, 200 barrels fresh medium mackerel.

The new gasoline sch. Mary E. Harty, Capt. Charles H. Harty, has been well christened, arriving Sunday noon with 150 barrels.

Sch. Richard Wainwright, Capt. Thaddeus Morgan, carries off the palm for the biggest trip, having 300 barrels. Capt. Morgan was second on the list when the season closed last season. He is making a fine start for another big stock.

Capt. Benj. Spurling has not been seining for several years, but he has not forgotten how to catch them, for he pushed the Marguerite Haskins up to the dock Sunday with 150 barrels.

Sch. Helen Miller Gould, Capt. Solomon Jacobs, is right on check for the second time this season, bringing in a dandy fare 200 bbls. Capt. Jacobs is usually around when there are any fish to be caught.

So many fish so early in the season is quite remarkable. Last year the first seining fare, 50 barrels, was landed April 19 and up to April 26 last season only 545 barrels had been received at Fulton market. So it will be seen that this is a big start for the season of 1901, and augurs well for the mackerel fleet. Visions of big stocks are already in the air and more arrivals are momentarily looked for.

The fish started this morning at eight cents apiece. They are large mediums going about 114 pounds apiece.

The trade on these mackerel was unexpectedly brisk and on account of this the price was advanced so that before the middle of the forenoon the fish were bringing better than eight cents apiece at which price first sales were made.

Mackerel Notes.

Reports from Ireland recently state that a few mackerel were caught there in February, but hardly any since the first of March. English and French fishing boats were in readiness about Kinsale, Bantry Bay, Baltimore and other points. The last of March, waiting for the fish and some small hauls had been made, all of which went promptly to the fresh fish market. The weather had not been favorable for prosecuting the industry, either.

John Nagle of this city has purchased from the town of Essex, through the selectmen, the entire catch of alewives at the Chebacco brook this spring, at $1.75 a barrel.

Sch. Senator, Capt. John McKay, stocked $2700 on her recent halibut trip.

SCH. CORSAIR AT NORFOLK.

Has 130 Barrels of Fresh Medium Mackerel.

Demand for Fish Greatly Exceeds the Supply.

A special despatch to the TIMES from Norfolk, Va., on Monday afternoon, announces the arrival there of sch. Corsair of this port, Capt. George Hamer, with 125 barrels of fresh medium mackerel. The fare was shipped to New York. Capt. Hamer evidently preferred to slip into Norfolk, ship his fish and hurry back on the ground, than to make the long run to New York.

There was lots of excitement at Fulton Dock on Monday and the work of taking out the four good fares there was hustled to keep up with the demand for the fish, which seemed to increase as the forenoon wore on. So great was the demand that the price was raised, and last night Boston dealers did not know whether they would get their orders any more than half filled. The mackerel were taken off Cape Henry and in about 20 fathoms of water which means about 20 miles off shore. A good body of fish is reported.
